

Container Grown Plants

Container Grown plants may be planted any time through the season, including in full bloom, without losing a beat. If you live close enough to pick up Container grown plants you should consider the list of cultivars available now, or pay us a visit during Bloom Season to see what tickles your fancy. Container grown plants are too large and heavy to ship by mailorder cost effectively, but our bareroot plants recover quickly and most do bloom the first year.

Ask about our environmentally friendly methods of growing our containers including Water Management, Nutrient Recovery, Symbiotic Inoculants and Biological Pest Predators.

Our 2 Gallon Container Grown plants are the best we have ever grown. With massive root systems, most are small clumps, some with a dozen or more fans. These are spectacular value !!!

One Gallon Clearance Plants

As we sort through our gardens there are odds and ends, misnamed and overstocked plants that we are putting into 1 gallon containers and clearing at very attractive prices.

Perfect for a landscape planting, these plants are rapidly becoming our best sellers.

A mix of double fans, triples, quads and better, these will transplant easily and will bloom the first year. Most are named daylilies, although some have lost their names and a few are misnamed. Many have been in containers several years or longer proving how tough these cultivars are.

These plants would be perfect for a larger planting where the criteria is good hardy plants in a variety of heights, forms and colours.

Daylily Rust

Our Gardens remain rust free. Evidence seems to indicate that Puccinia hemerocallidis (Daylily Rust) will not survive Canadian winters. Rust has become largely a non issue for the average Canadian collector.

Daylily Selection

Over the years we have visited many gardens and evaluated many many plants before bringing a selection home, to trial in our Ontario gardens. We have become very discriminating about the plants we grow and even more so about the cultivars we offer for sale.

In the rush to bring new cultivars to market many breeders focus on single elements without providing an entire plant that is noteworthy.

We are often disappointed in new introductions that provide the seller with an incredible catalogue picture (sometimes referred to as a mug shot) but really do not grow well, or impress when in the garden.

Our objective is

Spectacular Bloom & Outstanding Performance

We want every one of our plants to bring butterflies to your stomach when they bloom for you. Our selection criteria is done on many factors including but not limited to Vigor, Hardiness, Exceptional Beauty, Colour Intensity, Exquisite Form, Budcount, Branching, and Uniqueness.

We've selected and culled to the point that every one of our plants is exceptional. We believe our 2009 Collection of Daylilies are the best Daylily cultivars ever offered for Canadian Gardens.
