

Feature Cultivars for 2009

Satin Bird →

From Trahlyta breeding, SB shows the distinctive Chevron eyezone, but the real feature here is the intensity, clarity and depth of colour. Stunningly intense it will draw you back throughout the day

←H. middendorffii This species is well worth growing for it's early bloom – usually the earliest Daylily in the garden about the end of May and it reblooms the end of August

Dauntless →

Here is a Heritage Treasure that will make a valuable addition to any collection of historical daylilies. Hybridized by the father of the modern Daylily, A. B. Stout, and registered in 1935, Dauntless received the Stout Silver Medal in 1954.

←Daring

Dilemma one of our personal favorites DD has a gorgeous plum eye and edge with a bit of gold highlighting the edge The pink tinged Cream background displays the rich veining extending to the lightly ruffled edge.

Tusawilla Tigress →

Big, Bold and Beautiful!

Imagine clusters of 7 ¼" blooms, these attention drawing brilliant orange flowers have a darker eye and pale cream midribs. Sturdy tetraploid will rebloom with good conditions

←Dallas Star

Large Star shaped lavender blooms and chartreuse heart
